Sireme is the International Exhibition for Renewable Energy and Energy Management and showcases the latest products and innovations in the area of renewable energy. The show will take place at the Paris Expo Porte de Versailles between the 9th and 11th June 2010.

Exhibitors taking stands at the show include manufacturers of electrical equipment and environmentally friendly equipment for transportation, homes and businesses. The show is expected to attract many thousands of attendees, with most of them working in fields such as construction, local government, housing and utility services.

The show is being organised by EXPO INDUS, who have a wealth of experience in creating and managing trade fairs of this type. The aim is to bring together manufacturers, retailers and consumers and promote the long term use of renewable energy.

The venue of Paris Porte de Versailles receives on average 10 million visitors each year and is one of the most popular venues for trade shows such as Sireme. It is located centrally in the city, meaning that visitors can make use of the regular bus and metro services to reach it.

Of the many hundreds of hotels Paris has to offer there are several located close to the Porte de Versailles expo centre which offer excellent accommodation and are comfortable and reasonably priced. As Paris is one of the most popular destinations for visitors, Lek Boonlert, Head of Marketing at DirectRooms says, "Accommodation should be booked in advance to ensure that there will be no disappointment or delays when you arrive."
