Drug rehabs in Utah have helped save a number of drug dependents and alcoholics from darkness, and they are commended for the best success rates in Salt Lake City. Many families are thankful for the remarkable recovery of their patients who are now living sober and happy new lives. Timely intervention through highly applauded drug rehabilitation centers in Utah successfully restored patients' sobriety by providing clients the optimal tools necessary for their healing and recovery.

Drug addiction and alcoholism are two of the most serious and the most prevalent problem in the US and throughout the world. When it comes to drug rehab Salt Lake City reports that more than 20 million people in the US, 12 years old and older, have used illicit drugs. Drug addiction accounts for more than 19,000 deaths every year. The report is very alarming and despite efforts by the government to curb the problem, drug addiction and alcoholism is beyond control. The problem is getting worse and the number of addicts is increasing on a daily basis. Most of the victims to this debilitating habit are children in their early teens who get into drugs out of curiosity, out of peer pressure, and poor family relations. Some of these children are raised by parents who are drug dependent themselves, and some are influenced by a drug-dependent older sibling.

Medical and psychological studies have identified the debilitating effects of drug and alcohol abuse including the permanent loss of sobriety and health. Many drug or alcohol abusers die of car accidents while driving under the influence of drugs or alcohol. The family and the community suffer from drug related crimes and violence, approximately 80% of crimes in the US are drug or alcohol related.
